FREED LIFE PRISONER HERE

HUBER DROPS IN AND TAKES HIS MOTHER AWAY.

Father of the Young Wife He Murdered Tells What Led to the Crime-Huber Served a Little Over Seven Years New England Petition Got Him Out.

George Huber, who was pardoned by Gov. Draper of Massachusetts on Thursday after having served a little more than seven years of a life sentence for the murder of his young wife, who was Gertrude Rentel, came vesterday to 405 De Kalb avenue, Brooklyn, whereh is mother, Amelia Fleischman, was boarding and then departed hurriedly with her. At the boarding house it was said that they started for New Jersey.

Rudolph Rentel, father of the murdered girl, who keeps a candy shop at 208 Deentur street, said last night that at the time of the trial in 1963 a detective named Woods from Massachusetts discovered records in the old Kings County Court House showing that Huber had been convicted of killing a man on Myrtle avenue and after serving time had been pardoned by Gov. Hill. Rentel said that he and Woods found a certificate of Huber's marriage to a Mary Levine who was still living and had not been divorced Estate's Executor Charges That She Is from him at the time he met Gertrude Rentel on a Sunday school picnic and induced her to run away with him.

Rentel said that John E. Clarev, former efused to sign the petition.

Clarey thinks Huber was divorced from his first wife before he married Gertrude Rentel. He said he had heard the story about Huber having shot a man on Myrtle avenue some years ago, but never heard any verification of it. Huber and Gertride Rentel were found in Harlem by the garl's futher. Huber said they had been married in Jersey City, but Rentel insisted upon another marriage. Later he discovered that Huber had been married before.

Soon after the father told the girl about terey in the Berkshires. He saw them coming out of a boarding house and he shot twice at Fearing, wounding him slightly, and then he shot the girl. The Posidonia australia grows on a limestone bottom, but the action of the tide through many centuries has sifted over it masses of shells and sand, until the plant, foreing its way upward, lies on a deposit of its own fibre, intermixed with the sand and shells and varying in thickness from to 20 feet.

The quantity of fibre in these deposits on the South Australian coast is believed to be practically inexhaustible. In Moont South Australia, by means of post hole augers and other appliances the ex-tent of the deposits was tested by putting trial holes from high water mark out to low tide level, a distance of several miles. This was Elmerus, a thirteenth entury monk. Taking the flying squirrel for his model he gave successful exhibitions from a tower, soaring sometime above a furlong through space

And in the same century the learned philosopher Roger Bacon averred: "There s certainly a flying instrument, not that ever knew a man that had it, but I am particularly acquainted with the ingenious person who contrived it."

The first birdman to fly a considerable distance appears to have been John Babtiste Dante, a fifteenth century mathematician who lived in Perugia. He framed a pair of ingenious wings with which, it is narrated, he amused his fellow
